Stainless Steel Sculpture Range (1029 pieces)

Stainless steel sculpture is the choice when the piece must reflect its surroundings without fading. The mirror finish captures light, sky and planting, creating a visual anchor that shifts with the time of day and the weather. Brushed and painted finishes offer a softer presence, while the material's durability ensures long-term stability in outdoor and high-traffic indoor spaces.

Stainless Steel Sphere Sculpture Range (87 pieces)

A mirror polished stainless steel sphere stands as a reflective object in any space, turning light and surroundings into a moving surface. It is designed to be a focal point in gardens, lobbies, or public squares, where its smooth, seamless surface captures the sky, trees, or architecture and reflects them back with clarity. The form is simple but powerful, offering a sense of balance and presence without competing with its environment.

Stainless Steel Hemisphere Range (20 pieces)

A stainless steel hemisphere is a complete, geometric form that reflects light and space around it. It stands as a single, solid shape in a garden, courtyard or public square, where its smooth surface captures the sky, trees and surrounding architecture in a way that feels both precise and mysterious. The mirror finish turns the environment into a moving image, making the piece feel alive even when still.

Mirror Concave Sculpture Range (25 pieces)

A mirror concave sculpture is a curved surface that reflects and distorts the surrounding space. It is made from 304 or 316 stainless steel, formed by shaping plate over a mould, welding two hemispheres, and then mirror polished to a high sheen. The surface acts as a visual lens, bending light and space into a single, reflective plane that draws attention to the environment around it.

Stainless Steel Animal Sculpture Range (83 pieces)

A stainless steel animal sculpture is a form designed to stand in an outdoor space where light, movement and reflection interact with the environment. It is made from 304 or 316 stainless steel, or corten steel, and can be finished in mirror polish, brushed finish, or painted. The piece is built to scale from a customer's drawing or photograph, with the shell formed by welding two hemispheres over a mould, then polished to a high sheen or left with a textured surface. It is intended to be a focal point in a garden, park, plaza or public square, where its shape and surface reflect the sky, trees and surrounding architecture.

Corten Steel Sculpture Range (93 pieces)

Corten steel is chosen when the sculpture is meant to change over time. It develops a stable oxide layer outdoors, starting raw and orange and settling into a deep brown that integrates with planting, stone and grass. The surface is not a finish to be maintained—it is the form's evolution. This makes it suitable for spaces where the piece should appear established, not newly installed.

Bronze Sculpture Range (53 pieces)

Bronze is the material you choose when the piece is meant to stand in a space with presence and history. The metal is cast in a mould, then finished with a patina that can be controlled to a deep green, warm brown or antique black. It settles into a surface that reads as aged, not as new, and holds its tone through seasons of sun, rain and wind. The finish is not a coating but a chemical reaction that becomes part of the metal itself.

Metal Painting Range (36 pieces)

Metal painting is a wall sculpture made from stainless steel, designed to be mounted indoors or in sheltered outdoor areas. The surface is painted in colour or left in a natural finish, with forms that suggest water, scale, or abstract movement. It is not a mirror or reflective surface, but a flat or slightly curved panel that holds colour and shape as a visual element in a space.

Miniature Sculpture Range (20 pieces)

Miniature sculpture is a scaled-down version of larger public art, designed to stand in tight spaces where a full-size piece would overwhelm. It is built to be seen up close, with detail visible from a few meters away, making it suitable for office desks, entryways, garden corners, and interior display areas. The form is often abstract or figurative, with a focus on shape and surface rather than scale. It is made in 304 or 316 stainless steel, with finishes that include mirror polish, brushed, or painted, depending on the design. The piece is intended to be a focal point in a small setting, not a landmark in a landscape.

Public Art Sculpture Range (982 pieces)

This is a stainless steel sculpture designed for public or semi-public spaces where form, material and finish must hold up to weather and time. It is built to stand in squares, parks, hotel lobbies, garden courtyards or urban plazas, where it becomes a fixed point in the landscape or a visual anchor in a built environment. The piece is made from #304 or #316 stainless steel, available in mirror, brushed or painted finishes, and can be produced in standard sizes or to any custom dimension.
